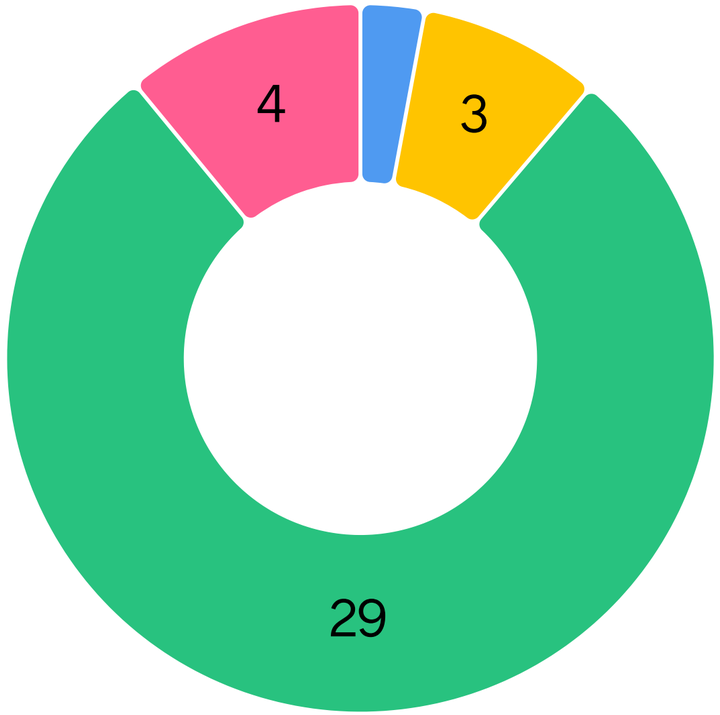
What surprised you most about Oxford so far?

Imagine you're listening to a lecture on nanotechnology. You understand about 60%. What do you do? Be honest!



1	Try to understand every word
3	Stop listening
29	Listen for the main ideas
4	Translate everything

Oxford challenge: What was most difficult?

6 Knowing what was important

24 Understanding terminology

9 Keeping up

5 Taking notes while listening

15 Staying focused

How do you know you've understood something? What could you do to show that you understood it?

do it smoothly，I can teach it to others and explain it

I can use it and convert it into my own language retelling.

I gain full understanding if I restate the idea freely. To show comprehension, I can teach the concept to others, work out relevant exercises, or rewrite the content with my personal logic.这

I can talk to others fluent and correct .

I can express it by myself clearly

I can demonstrate it myself. I can teach other people .

I know I understand it when I can rephrase the idea in my own words. I can also explain it to others clearly or work out related practice problems correctly.

I know I understand something once I can explain it simply.

How do you know you’ve understood something? What could you do to show that you understood it?

Fluently explain the principles to others.

produce my own opinions or thinkings

I achieve real understanding when I can paraphrase the content instead of reciting it. I can demonstrate it by explaining ideas plainly, applying knowledge to cases and clarifying confusing details.

I will repeat it in my own language.

can express it briefly

Give more examples related to this

I can immediately reflect the main information in my mind and have my own understanding.

I know I understand it when I can restate core ideas in my own words. I can explain concepts to peers, finish related questions independently, and link new knowledge to what I have learned before.

How do you know you've understood something? What could you do to show that you understood it?

I know I understand something when I can explain it simply in my own words. I can also apply the knowledge to new situations to prove my understanding

I can do summary I can teach other people the knowledge indicate my thoughts,and try to teach others

i can give several examples related to the knowledge，and can teach others about it.i can also apply the knowledge .

I can immediately reflect the main information in my mind and have my own understanding.

When I can tell others to understand

If the person I can speak to understands, then I already understand this very well, so the way I understand and present it is to explain it to others

Paraphrase the content in my own

How do you know you’ve understood something? What could you do to show that you understood it?

Hearing the key words, can clearly understand the meaning.

when i understand it and can explain to others， try to look for other answers to find whether it's the same as mine

catch the main idea、translate the idea from my own perspective

Apply it and summarize it absolutely,if i can tell it or teach it to someone else,that's means it got it

teach others

I will raise relevant questions and share my viewpoints in group.

Can answer most of the other people 's question and explain to others

How do you know you've understood something? What could you do to show that you understood it?

If I can think something or explain what someone said to another person， I know I have understood something. I will ask someone or AI ask me a question to show that I understood it

Which is most important to make an explanation easy to follow?

9 A clear main message

14 Good examples

8 Clear structure

1 Interesting visuals

0 Confident delivery

Which part of presenting is most challenging for you?

Rank the evidence from strongest to weakest

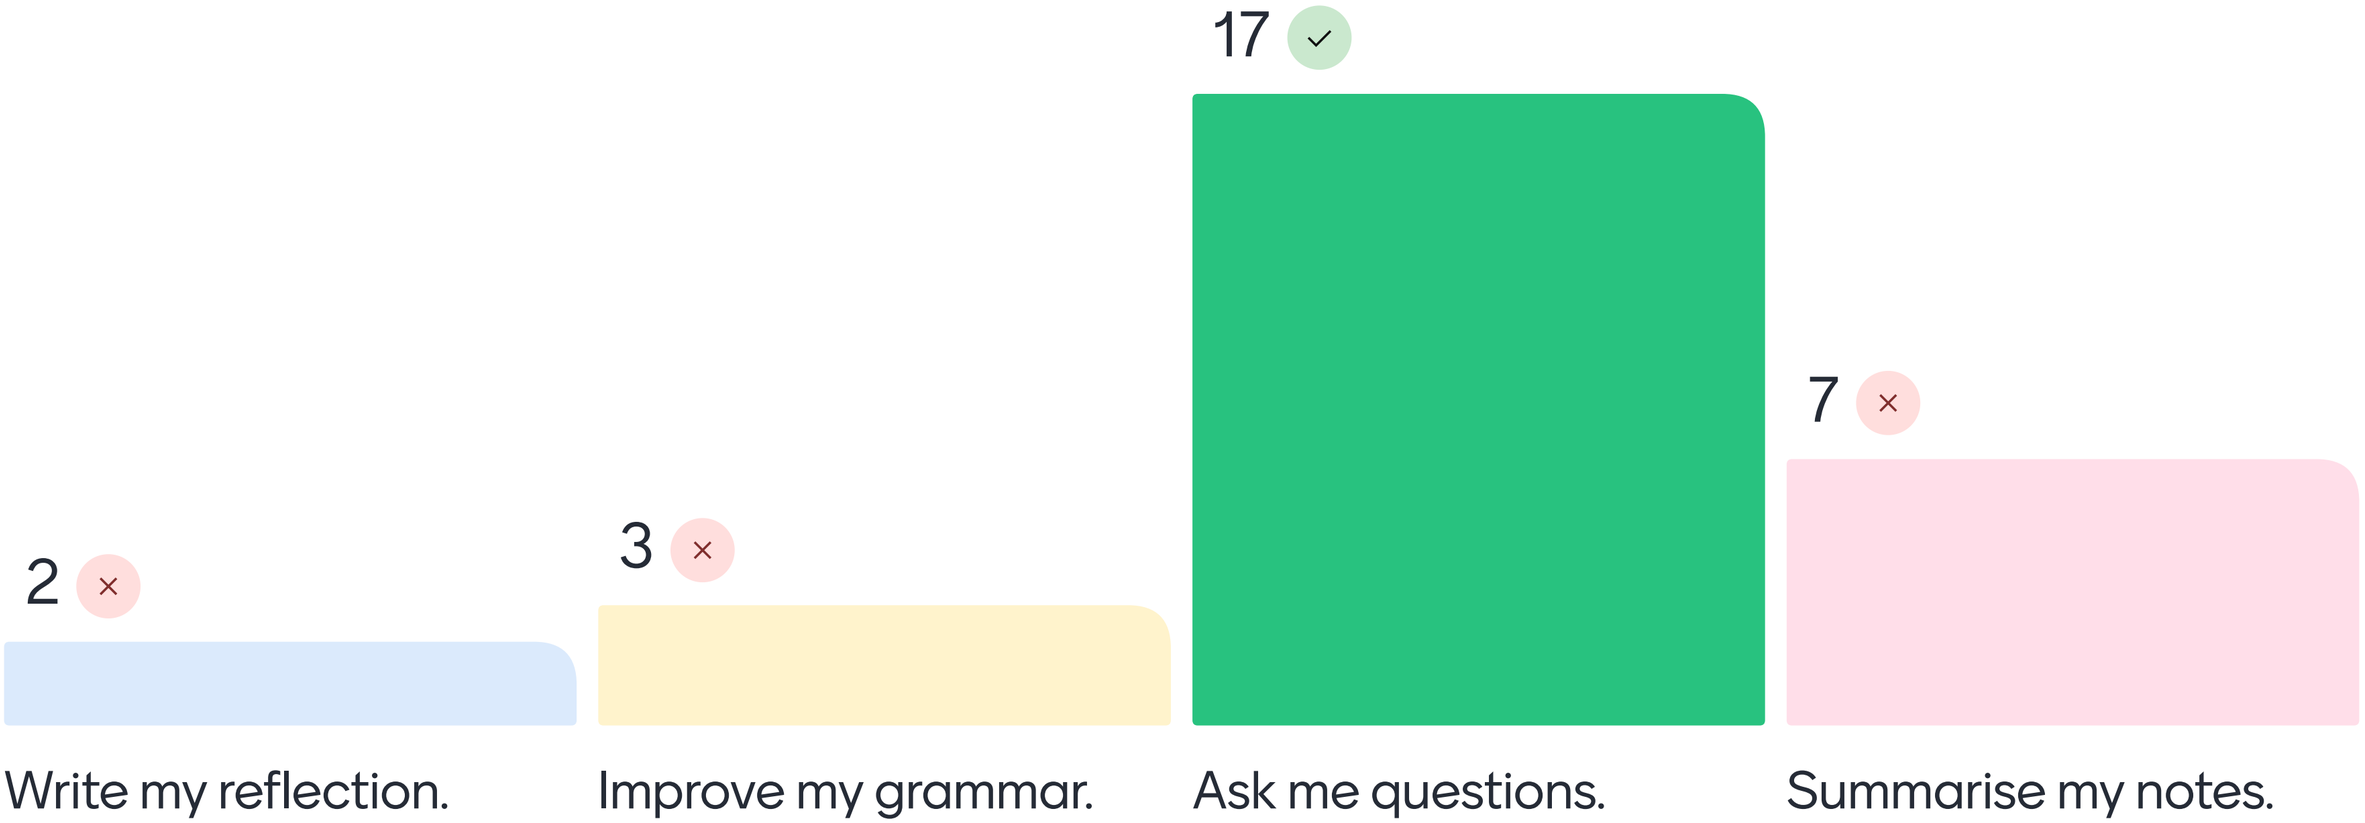
1. According to THE rankings, Oxford is number 1 in the world.

2. I observed more cyclists than bus passengers in Oxford.

3. Oxford is beautiful.

4. Oxford students study a lot.

Which AI prompt would help you reflect most deeply?



What's one piece of advice you'd give next year's Oxford students?

Stay healthy

Always be confident

just enjoy it !

prepare more pounds and study well

The admission standard for graduate students in China is a little lower.

Have fun!

Send more clothes that are slightly thicker.

happy

What's one piece of advice you'd give next year's Oxford students?

be happy

communicate confidently with professors and classmates

boys stay sexy

eat the breakfast

be active

Prepare more money

Learn English in advance before you come.

prepare loads of money

What's one piece of advice you'd give next year's Oxford students?

Be relaxed

you should definitely listen Jim's speech.it is so incredible. it will inspire you a lot

Enjoy it， brace it

Ask questions boldly

Grab some instant noodles

take it easy

Inclusiveness and diversity

can ai translater can't ai to answera

What's one piece of advice you'd give next year's Oxford students?

enjoy your life

enjoy

Inclusiveness and diversity

Bring more food

ask more questions，never be afraid.

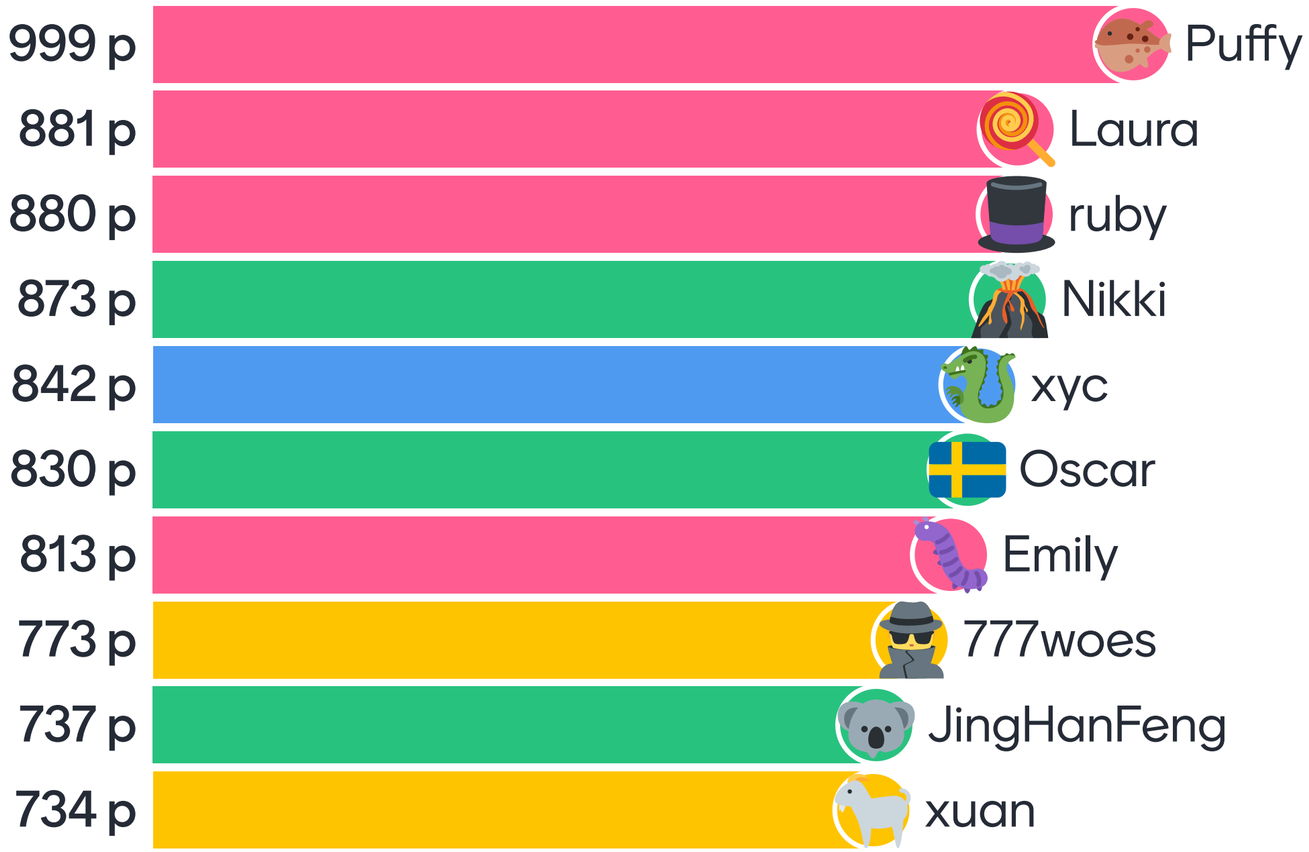
be humble

take part in the discussion activily,bring more money,take comfortable clothes,be confident and curious,enjoy the summer!

Have a good day !

What's one piece of advice you'd give next year's Oxford students?

Balance heavy study with exploring Oxford. Join interesting seminars, walk around old streets, and connect with different peers to enjoy both academic progress and campus life.

Be confident ,be open-minded


Quiz leaderboard